What is the fuel storage capacity of Angola?

What is necos architecture?
The NECOS architecture is designed to provide slices as a service. Each of these slices is a set of computational and networking resources created with the purpose that customer users (tenants) can run one or several application services on top.

Is necos a distributed system?
NECOS has been designed as a distributed system,each component in its architecture is designed as an independent service that may actually be implemented as a set of different servers dividing the management load geographically,by client,or by service.

What is the necos project?
The NECOS project aims to address this innovation in a lightweight manner by means of a service and infrastructure management platform,called the Lightweight Software Defined Cloud(LSDC) platform [NC1][NC2]. The LSDC platform exhibits the following three properties: providing a uniform management with a high-level of autonomicity.

What is the Angola Oil & Gas MoU?
Signed by Mauro Carvalho, Managing Partner at Famar and André Pitra, Executive Manage at Angobetumes during Angola Oil &Gas 2024, the MoU is poised to improve Angola's fuel supply chain while ensuring storage systems meet regulatory requirements.

How does necos work?
Since NECOS adapts the volume and location of resources following platform-related variables,the main idea of this process is to present the slice as a system that is stable and isolated in terms of those variables.
