Is Taiwanese identity reversible?
For one thing,I believe there is recognition that the awareness of Taiwanese identity is now irreversible. The KMT government did things like rename the "Taiwan Post" to "Chunghwa Post" as soon as it came in. But it did not take much time to perceive that it would cause a backlash among the Taiwan populace.

Who are Han Taiwanese?
Most Han Taiwanese are descended from the Hoklo people,native to the coastal regions of southern Fujian,and the Hakka people,native to eastern Guangdong. Hoklo and Hakka migrants arrived in large numbers during the 17th and 18th century. Descendants of Hoklo now compose approximately 70 percent of Taiwan's population.

18 · Taiwan - Politics, Economy, Culture: In March 2000 Chen Shui-bian of the opposition DPP won the presidential election. This was a watershed event; the KMT had been in power for more than half a century. Some hailed the election as the final step in Taiwan"s process toward democratizing and establishing majority rule. Others called it a fluke. The latter view ...

Never felt safer than in Taiwan but I still followed standard precautions of staying out of sight, leaving early in the morning and not trespassing or leaving any traces. Most urban parks didn"t seem suitable to spend the night in, sleeping at the beach seems to be a non-issue, just mind the tides and weather.

Taiwan is more care free and has an easy going lifestyle. This is felt in both your spare time and in the schools. Korea has less English proficiency so getting through day to day life feels more complicated, whereas in Taiwan I always felt like I could get by.

Short Answer: preference of Taiwan over Republic Of China (ROC) or vice versa largely depends on how long one can trace ancestry in Taiwan. Longer Answer: The issue of simply calling Taiwan "a China in favour of democracy" or "Nationalist China" ignores the fact that most Taiwanese people don"t identify as Chinese, not to mention that the Republic of China essentially took ...
